

Splinting is now easier and more dignified with Releve.

Releve® is a splinting device for patients with Rectocele/POP who experience incomplete evacuation and voiding.

The soft, silicone balloon provides support to the vaginal walls during bowel movements to prevent bulges that trap stool.

The result is easier, more complete bowel movements with less straining.

Inflated Silicone Balloon

Why patients love Releve®

- Prevents stuck stool that causes straining and frequent trips to the toilet.
- Allows patients to relax while in use, which is critical for successful bowel movements.
- Helps patients feel completely empty after a bowel movement and voiding.
- The deflated balloon is the size of a tampon, allowing for easy insertion and removal.
- Releve is latex-free.

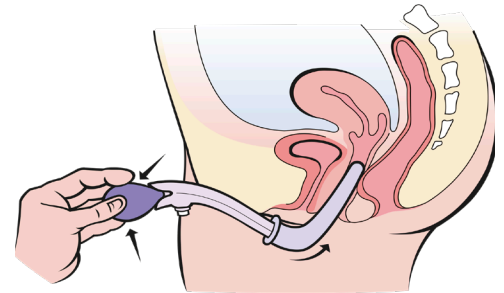

Releve® should be replaced yearly. Disposable covers are provided and required for use to protect against bacterial contamination.

Releve was developed by a colorectal surgeon as a first line treatment for low-grade prolapse patients that were not candidates for surgery.

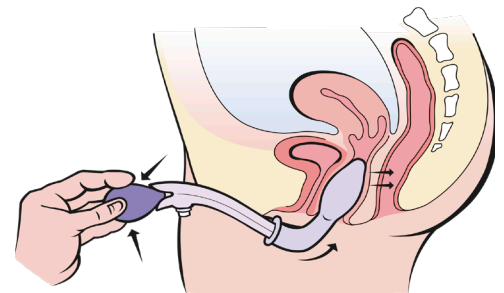

How it works:

- The uninflated balloon is introduced into the vagina prior to a bowel movement.
- A squeeze bulb allows patients to inflate the balloon to the appropriate size.
- The inflated balloon provides mild, pressurized support to the weakened vaginal walls to prevent the formation of rectocele and/or cystocele.
- The handle allows patients to hold the balloon in place during a bowel movement or voiding.
- Once complete, the device is deflated by pressing the air release valve, then removed and cleaned for next use.
- Releve includes single-use covers to prevent bacterial contamination from multiple uses.
